DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

The following is a quotation of the second paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall conclude with one or more claims particularly pointing out and distinctly claiming the subject matter which the applicant regards as his invention.

Claims 12-14 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention. Claim 12 refers to an underlying layer of crystalline metal oxide, but dependent claim 13 refers to the metal material of the underlying layer. Should this be metal material of the metal oxide?

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

Claims 12 and 13 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Norton (US 6,214,712). Norton teaches a semiconductor substrate with a layer of metal oxide thereon selected from a group including ZrO_2 (col. 4, lines 45-57). Norton also teaches that the metal oxide layer may be deposited an additional time, thereby forming two layers of the metal oxide (col. 9, lines 20-25). This would form an article of a semiconductor substrate, and first and second layers of ZrO_2 .

Claims 12 and 13 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Shoup et al (US 6,077,344). Shoup teaches a substrate with a cerium oxide layer thereon followed by a YSZ layer (col. 5, lines 25-30). Shoup teaches that an electronically active layer may be deposited on the metal oxide layers, such as a semiconductor.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claim 14 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Norton (US 6,214,712).

Norton teaches a semiconductor substrate with a layer of metal oxide thereon selected from a group including ZrO_2 (col. 4, lines 45-57). Norton also teaches that the metal oxide layer may be deposited an additional time, thereby forming two layers of the metal oxide (col. 9, lines 20-25). Norton does not give a specific example of forming an additional layer of a ferromagnetic material over the second ZrO_2 layer. Norton does teach that the article enables the integration of various epitaxial oxide materials and device structures by providing a crystalline oxide template for additional epitaxial film growth. Norton clearly teaches that uses for the article include formation of devices based on the integration of the epitaxial with ferromagnetic materials (col. 11, lines 30-41). It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to form a ferromagnetic device with the article described by Norton as it is clearly contemplated by Norton to do so.
